Voice Script Overview

N/A — Music-driven visual reel, no voice-over or narration.

Style Anchor

Color Palette

- Primary: Warm neutrals — off-white, cream, warm grey
- Secondary: Muted earth tones — olive, slate, sand
- Accent: T-shirt colors punch through — red, blue, cream-yellow, grey graphic
- Background/Neutral: Concrete, asphalt, weathered bleacher wood — natural urban textures
- Mood: Warm, golden, slightly desaturated

Photographic / Visual Style

- Medium: Photography — real, shot-on-location feel

- Style Reference: Lifestyle/documentary hybrid — like a friend filmed this, but with cinematic framing
- Degree of Abstraction: Photorealistic — grounded, authentic, no stylization

Lighting

- Overall Mood: Warm golden hour — late afternoon sun, soft long shadows
- Key Light Style: Natural sunlight, soft and directional
- Time of Day Feel: Golden hour — warm tones, gentle lens flare welcome

Camera Conventions

- Primary Framing: Mix — wide establishing, then medium/close-ups through binocular vignette
- Movement Style: Static to slow handheld — observer scenes steady, binocular POVs with subtle drift
- Perspective: Eye-level throughout — grounded, relatable
- Binocular POV: Circular vignette with soft dark edges, slight chromatic warmth, shallow depth of field on subject

Character / Product Representation

- People: Gen Z guys (18-24), with distinct Gen Z styling — messy/textured hair (curtain bangs, grown-out cuts, bedhead waves), baggy bottoms (wide-leg pants, oversized shorts, jorts). Not polished, not athletic — the "I woke up like this but it's intentional" look. Diverse, natural, real faces — not model-perfect
- Product: The Vindof shirts ARE the product — clearly visible, well-lit, focal point in every binocular shot. Shown in natural context, never staged. The contrast between effortless Gen Z styling below the waist and the detailed Vindof pieces on top is the quiet statement
- Brand Elements: Vindof neck label visible in Scene 6 close-up. Vindof wordmark on final card. No forced logos elsewhere

Overall Aesthetic

A golden-hour afternoon at an outdoor basketball court where the clothes are the most interesting thing happening. Gen Z guys just existing — messy hair, baggy jorts, but wearing pieces that reward a second look. The binocular device creates a curated, voyeuristic intimacy: you're noticing things that don't announce themselves. Quiet maximalism in motion — every detail earns its place, nothing screams.

 - Text Content: VINDOF wordmark / logo
 - Style Notes: Vindof brand typography (all caps, clean). White or cream wordmark on deep charcoal/black background. Simple fade in, hold 0.5s, done.

Production Notes

- Music: Chill, upbeat, casual track — should feel effortless, not high-energy. Think lo-fi meets soft hip-hop or indie electronic.
- Color Grading: Warm golden hour grade throughout. Slightly lifted blacks for a filmic feel. Desaturate slightly except for the Vindof garments — let the clothing colors punch through the otherwise muted palette.
- Binocular Vignette: Consistent circular frame with soft dark edges across Scenes 3-6. Slight chromatic warmth inside the circle. The vignette should feel optical and real, not a heavy-handed overlay.
- Transitions: Cut transitions throughout — no fades or wipes between binocular POV shots. The quick cuts build rhythm. Only the final wordmark uses a fade-in.
- Pacing: Deliberate open (3s) → binocular flashes accelerate slightly (2s → 1.5s → 1.5s → 2s) → quiet close (1s) → brand stamp (1s). Total ~13s.
- T-Shirt Reference Images: Product shots of all 5 Vindof pieces should be provided to the image generation pipeline as reference images to ensure garment accuracy.
- Text Rendering: All text (Vindof wordmark in Scene 8) handled via Remotion, not NanoBanana. NanoBanana prompts all end with "No text in image."
